This brief mandate from that great oracle and autocrat of fashion in America, Harper's Bazar, we find in that excellent house old journal of November, in a first page article on Paris fashions, of which the opening paragraph is devoted to the fashour own sterner but not less use d influence to aid the struggles of that role band of women who a few short heroic band of women who a few short years ago entered upon a glorious crusade to compel all women who respected health and beauty to "suspend from the shoulders," shall we desert them in the very moment of victory?—Shall we, in service obedience to the command of fashion, now throw away the auxiliary article of raiment that was the bond of unity between the dress reformers and ourselves, and laugh those our noble condjutators to scorn, while we buckle a skate-strap around our recreamt waists? Forbid it, heaven. Or, still more potent in these matters, forbid it, good Bauar.

If the suspender is, on short notice, summarily abolished, think, think of the superfluous, useless suspender buttons that and urine, is not "long." The "long" that it will not change into vinegar. The comes from the corn stalks, straw and other rubbish that are thrown into it, or used for absorbents or bedding. Whynot cut up all such material, so that the manure will always be fine enough to plow in without trouble, or use for a top-dressing? Then we should have no excuse for keeping great manure plies about to "rot down" and no need of "compost heaps." Manure does not improve in its fertilizing power by keeping. It is never any better than when it is first made. Why keep it merely to improve its mechanical conditional conditions and the state of the sta between the the thumb and foreinger, and then "drag" down until it slips out of of their grasp, in this way the teat and udof their grasp, in this way the teat and ud-der both are often severely injured. The acquainted with his eccentricities, and freions for our own sterner but not less useful sex.

We are very reluctant to oppose any mandate of the Bazar made within its own proper jurisdiction. But we feel that it has touched upon a point that will interest est every man who loves his country and his clothes, when it assails the suspender. We combat the position of the Bazar on this point, not from the love of controversy, but because we feel it to be a duty. Our highly cultured and eminently refined contemporary may perplex us with the mysteries of chenile fringe, repped silks, Breton lace and Watteau polonaise, but when it enters the domain of the suspender, mankind emerges from the obscurity of ignorance into the bright white light of intelligence and experience, and defies the arm of the tyrant.

Throw away our suspenders! Are we to understand, then, that the men of the fushionable world, that men of culture, refinement and education, the merchant, the artist and the poet, are to cast away the fundamental article of their confederate apparel, the one that holds the others in the bondsof union, and substitute therefor the humbler strap of the second hand! Are the men who carry this country in their brains, the men who fill the capitol with the thunders of their elequence, to break and mar the effect of their confederate apparel, the one that holds the others in the bondsof union, and substitute therefor the humbler strap of the second hand! Are the men who carry this country in their brains, the men who fill the capitol with the thunders of their finest periods by pausing 10° hitch? Heir unstable waistbands, after the highly effective manner of the dramatic sailor? What, shall we, who have added the weight of our voices and influence to aid the struggles of that heroic band of women who a few short of the formatic sailor? What, shall we, who have added the weight of our voices and influence to aid the struggles of that heroic band of women who a few short work into circulation as flat money in the benighted realms of paganism. Think of the complication in our home mercantile circles that would result from such circulation. Think what would be the feeling between this country and Burmath, when an up country bank of that pagan region should present 1,450,895 suspender buttons, bearing the imprint "R. M. Raab & Bro." to that firm for redemption in standard coin, the pagan bank having recived them on deposit from its Christian convert customers, who had received them from American Sunday school boxes. The suspender cannot be abolished. We all know the agony of the man at the evening party or at the sociable when one suspender button, only one out of six, gives way what torments, then, would he not saffe it the Bear, with its iconoclastic hand, should reach down and tear the whole fabric of suspenders from his broad shoulders?

Suspenders are intimately connected with the progress of mankind in the arts, the sciences, religious liberty and free education. Where men wear suspenders education is liberal, religion is prosperous and progressive, and the arts of genus and progressive, and the arts of lourish. Where men do not wear sus

When cider is drawn from the cask some leave a vent; this lets out the gases and manure, or "long manure," as the English call it? The manure itself, i.e., the dung and urine, is not "long." The "long" that it will not change into vinegar. The comes from the corn stalks, straw and life principles are destroyed. Other nos-

Some milkers seize the root of the teat is Some milkers seize the root of the teat. in the lunatic asylum at Worcester. In the department where Starbecker was emof their grasp, in this way the teat and udder both are often severely injured. The proper mode of milking is to take the teat in the entire hand, and, after pressing it in the entire hand, and, after pressing it upward, that it may be filled from the capacious milk reservoir above, to compress it first at the base between the thumb and forefinger, then successively by each of the three succeeding fingers, until completely emptied. The teat is at the same time genly drawn upon, but this severe traction is altogether unnecessary, and highly injurious. The cow should always be milked regularly, and the milk entirely drawn on the milk in the disease of the teats or udder. More cowse cows are ruined from faults of this kind than from all other causes, and our readers will do well to avoid them.—Coloman's Rual Morel.

MANGE on pigs is caused by a minute insect, which is probably hatched from eggs adhering to the skin. There is not way of curing it, or of preventing its spread, except by killing the insects and the thin grasp—notonly on the pigs themselves but also on the sides of the pens, nosts or anything that the pigs rub against. To destroy them on the woodwork, nothing is probably so good as petroleum, and though we have not tried it, we have little doubt but that it would also cure the pigs, especially if applied before the disease usually manifests itself on the skin under the armpits and thighs and inside the forelegs. At first small red blotches or pimples apper, and those gradually spread as the insects will be to kill the insect by the prompt and continued use of carholic acid, petrometry a well kept, shade trees, ornamental shrubbery, paint without and whitewash within—all these are worth more to a farmer in money value than a few hundred dollars carefully scraped toghether and jealously hoarded and loaned to a needy neighbor at interest. No investiment pays so well as money judiciously spent in farm introvements. Draining wet land will pay 50 to 100 per cent on its cost every year; a gate will save its cost in a short time; a good fence will save its whole cost in one night; a well-kept garden, a neat lawn, orchard and shade trees, which need not cost $100$, have added ten times that amount to the value of the farm, and the comfort and self respect gained through the outlay for these and for their possession are worth more than the cost.—New York Times.
